A bit of history ...

The history of the origins of this Palace dates back to the Middle Ages (12th century). Owned by the medieval church, the palace belonged during the Modern Age to great families of Barcelona, such as the Boixadors and the Grimau, back then it was reformed and got bigger. The house was badly damaged by bombing during the 1697 siege of Barcelona and was abandoned. Finally, in 1698, the owners sold it in a dilapidated state to Pau Dalmases Castells (from whom it receives the name today), who built the house again, with smooth stone walls and an important sculptural decoration, in which his son Pau Ignasi Dalmases participated, an intellectual, one of the most interesting characters of Barcelona in those days, also known for being a great cultural promoter of the time.
